Clive Hutchinson

Clive Hutchinson is currently a lecturer in Creative Arts at Federation University. He has also held the position of the Head of Department, Design Industries, at Canberra Institute of Technology and Head of Academic Studies, at CATC Design School. At CATC he established the Diploma of Photoimaging on the Melbourne campus and headed the redevelopment of curriculum for national delivery on all CATC campuses. As Senior Lecturer and Head of Photo Media at James Cook University Clive completed a Master of Creative Arts Degree, developed an internationally recognised teaching program, and played a key role in restructuring the School of Creative Arts and its programs. His work as an educator has been recognised at a national level, with multiple teaching awards including an Australian Learning and Teaching Council citation. The quality of the student experience, innovative student and community engagement strategies, and career realisation for students are his central focus. Clive has long supported international engagement for staff and students developing educational opportunities in Cambodia, Singapore and Scandinavia. Clive's art practice and research centers on the photographic portrait and participation in multi-arts collaborations.
